New Bedford Public Schools launches new website

The redesign features improved content and navigation, translation function, and a link to the official New Bedford Public Schools Facebook page

NEW BEDFORD, MA – The New Bedford Public Schools launched a new district website today to strengthen communication with families, staff, and the community. Superintendent Pia Durkin presented the new site, www.newbedfordschools.org, to the New Bedford School Committee at its meeting tonight.

The new website features an updated design and streamlined navigation to provide users with easy access to timely, up-to-date information online. As part of Superintendent Durkin's efforts to improve public awareness and involvement in the schools, the site features the latest news, announcements, events and activities taking place across the school district. The site also includes a universal search function and a tool for translating content into 80 other languages as well as a link to our new Facebook page.

Each school in the district also has its own pages on the site, including calendars of important school events and activities.

"We are delighted to rollout this new and improved website to give members of our community online access to the latest news about the New Bedford Public Schools," said Dr. Durkin. "This site is designed to help families in particular get the information they need – right at their fingertips – to support their children's education."

Dr. Durkin noted that the new site remains a work in progress, with schools and central offices continuing to develop new content and features. Future improvements to the site will include curriculum updates to provide teachers with the most recent instructional resources for the classroom, as well as portals for direct communication between teachers and parents.

To provide feedback on the new website, please send an email to webmaster@newbedfordschools.org.
